

[Inside this issue]

OCT/NOV_05

FEATURE >>> LEGAL >>> DILEMMA >>> NEWS >>> RESEARCH >>> BRIEFING >>> DIARY

- 03 LEADER
A world of two halves. What can the UK do to improve global health and safety standards?
- 04 NEWS
 ... MEPs opt out on sunlight ... laptops cost Transco ... work pressure is biggest cause of mental ill health ... Richard Doll ... doctor suspended for breaching Hep C rules ... prosecutions rise for attacks against NHS staff ... £620,000 for stressed former soldier ... small firms give little advanced thought to disability ... welfare reform Green Paper ... no case for mandatory flu jabs ...
- 10 LEGAL NEWS ... no need for additional expert – Heyward v Plymouth Hospital NHS Trust ... indecent disclosure – Edmund Nuttall Ltd v Butterfield ... mediation is preferred – Vahidi v Fairstead House School Trust ...
- 12 FEATURE
Common mental health problems
 A comprehensive review of research on common mental health problems at work provides support for CBT-type interventions. But quality research in other areas is lacking. John Ballard reports the findings.
- 15 FEATURE
Dyslexia at work
 The British Dyslexia Association estimates that four per cent of people in the UK are severely dyslexic. Nicola Godwin investigates the problems experienced by individuals, the support available and how some employers, notably the police and fire and rescue services, have made adjustments to accommodate individuals with the condition.
- 20 OPINION
Back to reality
 The HSE has launched a campaign to reduce back pain at work. Charles Pither argues that the focus on ergonomic interventions is misplaced and that more could be achieved by changing the emphasis to pain management.
- 22 FEATURE
Longer hours, shorter lives
 Paul Suff reviews the mounting evidence that long hours affect workers' health and safety and examines why UK workers are particularly vulnerable. What can employers do to protect their employees?
- 26 FEATURE
Evidence-based occupational health
 A major project is underway to develop and endorse evidence-based OH guidelines. In the first of a series of articles, project director Ira Madan explains why evidence-based medicine is so important.
- 28 DILEMMA
Creating a smoke-free workplace
 Is ventilation adequate to protect pub and club workers from the effects of environmental tobacco smoke or do we need an outright ban? Oliver Griffiths, consultant to the hospitality industry, and Alan Woodall, specialist registrar in public health, argue their points of view.
- 30 EXPERT WITNESS
Working abroad
 The law is not always straightforward when workers are posted abroad, either permanently or temporarily. Diana Kloss explains.
- 32 RESEARCH DIGEST
 ... computer-related MSDs ... shift work as a risk factor for diabetes ... shift-work sleep disorder ... psychosocial factors in back pain ... historical evidence ... substance misuse in healthcare workers ... stress reduces breast cancer risk ... epilepsy and driving
- 36 BOOKSHELF, LETTERS & DIARY
 ... absence management ... PTSD ... key events in occupational health
- 37 TOOLBOX
 ... roundup of regulatory changes, accident data, guidance, campaigns and consultations