Medical decision-making in ill-health retirement

Ill health retirement (IHR) is one of the most complex areas in occupational health and should only be considered when all other options, from reasonable adjustments to alternative work, have been explored.

Applications are often subject to appeals and may be turned down by trustees if the application is not made in accordance with the rules. This can lead to complaints from both the individual and the employer.

This new workshop from The At Work Partnership looks at how occupational health can advise employees and employers – to help make fair decisions, which are less likely to be challenged.

How will attending this training benefit you?

You will gain:

- A detailed knowledge of how to give evidence-based advice in ill-health retirement (IHR) cases
- A comprehensive understanding of your roles and responsibilities – either as an OH doctor or OH nurse
- An insight into the complexity of scheme rules and relevant law
- Enhanced comprehension of the ethical issues
- An opportunity to learn from the experience of others in our case studies and to benchmark your opinions with peers
- Improved knowledge and understanding to assist in decision-making

ABOUT OUR EXPERT TUTORS

Dr John Ballard has been researching and writing on OH and disability issues for over 30 years. He edits The At Work Partnership journal, Occupational Health [at Work]. He is an honorary fellow of the FOM.

Dr Simon Sheard is medical director at Health Partners Group. He has provided medical advice to a number of significant public sector pension schemes, including PCSPS and SPPA (Scottish NHS, Teachers and LGPS) and to several private sector pension funds. He is chair of the SOM Special Interest Group on Pension Scheme Working.

Prof Diana Kloss MBE is a barrister, former employment judge and honorary senior lecturer in OH law at the University of Manchester. Her publications include Occupational Health Law (Wiley Blackwell, 2020). She is an honorary fellow of the FOM, an ACAS arbitrator, and honorary president of the Council for Work and Health.

Dr Tony Williams set up Working Fit Ltd, an occupational health consultancy, in 2003. He advises on ill health retirement under the local government pension scheme. He was chair of the Government review into the Normal Pension Age for firefighters, and advised on pension age for the RNLi and prison officers.

Dr Mark Groom is a consultant occupational health physician whose primary current role is the clinical lead for Police and Fire Service Medical Appeals, a service provided by Health Partners Group under contract with the Home Office. He was previously the pensions lead for Health Management.

Clair Alcock is head of police pensions for the National Police Chiefs' Council. She brings a wealth of knowledge of public sector pensions, and has over 24 years' experience in this field.
